

Anya just got everything she thought she wanted.

So why isn't she happier?

Anya's made the colony team. She's going to the planet—and even if it's with a guy she barely knows, at least he respects her art skills and her ability to grow things. That's way better than what she expected in her life partner.

On the other hand, her schedule is intense, the living conditions are cramped, everybody seems to be in her business, and her dad is still trying to make life difficult for everyone.

Plus, she has to start over making friends when that has never been her strong suit.
